How Skype and email could help seniors avoid loneliness – and an early death

University of Toronto lab looking at ways of combating isolation

By Jesse Hirsh, CBC News Posted: Dec 26, 2014 7:00 AM ET Last Updated: Dec 26, 2014 7:00 AM ET

Researchers say that loneliness is not only emotionally taxing but can affect your life expectancy.

This is of particular concern to seniors, but many have found that modern communications technology provides a means of keeping loneliness at bay.

Just ask 94-year-old Bertha Kronenberg, who lives in Revera's Forest Hill retirement home in Toronto.

Kronenberg grew up in an orphanage in Johannesburg, and her early life was devoid of love and human contact – staff in the orphanage called children by numbers rather than their

Now just six years shy of 100, Kronenberg's life is full of love and meaningful connections, even though her family lives in South Africa.

That's because more than a decade ago, she taught herself to use her computer to reach out and stay in touch. When she's skyping with her sons and grandchildren, she says she feels they're in the room with her. She says she has made and maintains deep friendships online.

These connections might even be helping to keep her alive, because loneliness can be lethal.

"Seniors that experience social isolation and loneliness are more likely to suffer from stress, depression, cognitive and functional decline, morbidity and death," warns Barbara Barbosa Neves, a research associate at the Technologies for Aging Gracefully lab (TAGlab) at the University of Toronto.

Neves stresses that sending an email or skyping with an aging relative is not the same as visiting with them in person, but she says a growing body of research suggests that digital connections play a crucial role in maintaining and improving seniors' quality of life.

Preventing social isolation

The largest study on the impact of loneliness, published in 2012 in the Archives of Internal Medicine, shows that people who are socially isolated are twice as likely to die prematurely.

It found that lonely seniors were nearly 50 per cent more likely to die earlier than seniors who felt meaningfully connected with others, even after results were adjusted for factors such as depression, socioeconomic status and existing health conditions.

To put that in context, that means loneliness is nearly twice as dangerous as obesity, with a mortality rate comparable to smoking.

Ron Baecker is dedicated to changing that, and as the founder and director of the TAGlab, he's trying to do something about it.

His lab has developed technology called InTouch, which is designed to combat social isolation and loneliness. It uses "asynchronous messaging" – that is, platforms that don't require both parties to communicate at the same time, such as email - multimedia and whatever medium the individual recipient prefers.

InTouch allows family members to send video messages to each other and have them appear on televisions, computers or tablets, so that regardless of availability, loved ones can stay

The technology is designed to be as accessible as possible, leaving no excuse not to keep in contact with family members, regardless of their chosen technology platform or available

*We think that asynchronous multimedia messaging has a great role to play... "Face to face communications and internet communications go hand in hand. One does not take away from the other," says Baecker

"We're also looking to enable this technology to encourage families to work together, not just from the point of view of communication, but engaging productively around issues of quality of life and health that seniors encounter regularly.

Jesse Hirsh is the host of Next Age. It airs at 7 a.m. (7:30 NT) on Radio One on Dec. 26 and again at 4 p.m. (4:30 NT) on Jan. 1.

1. Our Community

Programming

- 9 participants in Elder Women Drop-in group, 11 participants in talk by Colonel Keith Maxwell, 2 participants for Spoken Word Poetry.
- Freedom to Read week display two contests.
- Please see attached article "How Skype and email could help seniors avoid loneliness and an early death."
 Future library and outreach programming may address this issue.
- New to BC www.newtobc.ca Public Library InterLink and the Ministry of Citizenship and Immigration. Please see attached screen shots. Not all information for Sechelt available yet.
- Food for Fines Feb. 14-28 resulted in 400+ lbs of food and $120.00 donation to the Food Bank. 9 library users cleared their accounts of old lost items.

Collection

- By public request, several "family friendly" movies were ordered and have been received.
- By public request, several new Eurodramas have been ordered.
- Before the lease is renewed in June, the books in the off-site storage locker will be evaluated by staff and donated to Better World Books or returned to library shelves. Furniture will be relocated to SD46 storage and the locker lease will not be renewed.
- New Legal Resources permanent display, which is kept up-to-date and pertinent to BC law, include the following resources: Power of Attorney, When I'm 64: Controlling Your Affairs, When I'm 64: Services, A Death in Your Family, Being an Executor, Electronic Devices Privacy Handbook: A Guide to Your Rights etc.
- Non-prescription eyeglasses are now available for patron use.

Numbers

• Early evaluation of new extended hours for the first two weeks of March — in order of popularity, most visits during new hours occur on Mondays, Tuesdays and Saturdays. During the first two weeks of new hours, the library saw an increase in 204 patrons or 2% of the annual in-person visits. With an ad campaign and the busiest months occurring during the summer, numbers are expected to increase. Staff are being stopped on the street and told that the new hours are appreciated.

Staff

 Computer Tutor student position is over at the end of March and staff will absorb the need for computer assistance.

Finance

Sechelt Public Library and Gibsons & District Public Library are requesting vendors allow us to share online database subscriptions. To date, we have successfully negotiated the following agreements this year:
Ancestry.ca - a savings of $1272.00 annually per library.
 GALE Courses - a savings of $1500.00 annually per library.

From the Comments box:

- "I love the staff, the new look for the shelves and our luck to have such a great library in our town."
- "I love the library, I wish it was open Sundays "" "I love the new hours."
- "Excellent service, excellent selection for all."
- "In some libraries I've seen suggestions and responses posted on a board that was good as we could see what others wanted and whether these suggestions could work or not. Suggestion give more space to the

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT for March 16, 2015

- computers. It's very crowded in there and hard to get in and out especially with a walker. Perhaps the lobby area could be used for computer use. Otherwise everything is great.
- "I LOVE LOVE this library and the ladies make every visit wonderful AND thank you so much for more hours and new computers! Thank you!!"
- Verbal request for a walker with seat and basket.
