This is especially useful when you want to search for that elusive ancestor once again – as collections are updated, the indexing changes and search results may (if you're lucky) yield results they didn't earlier. Reason: Indexed Incorrectly
Note: I can't highlight the full date, as they're from two distinct parts of the record. The 1822 is at the TOP of the page, while the February 10 is in the baptismal entry. Also, the DoB was indexed correctly as 14 Jan 1822.

FamilySearch citations generally follow those outlined in Elizabeth Shown Mills' book Evidence Explained and can be helpful to use as guides if you want to learn how to cite with this method.

In this case, the citation is too brief, so you would have to add to it with details from the image by clicking View Original Document.

Revealing source information...

The screenshot shows a digital archive interface for a film. At the top, it displays "Film # 007906592" and "Image 167 of 664". Below this is a large image of an open book with two pages of handwritten records. The left page is labeled "[Page 174]" and the right page is labeled "[Page 175]". Both pages contain tables of baptism records with columns for names, dates, and other details. A red box highlights a specific entry on the left page, and another red box highlights a specific entry on the right page. Below the image, there are tabs for "Image Index" and "Information". The "Information" tab is active, showing a "Catalog Record" section with the following details:

Catalog Record	Item Number	Film/Digital Note
Parish registers for St. Matthew's Church, Bethal Green		Baptisms vol. 12-14 1819-1828

Below the catalog record, there is a "Citation" section with the following text:

There is a "Copy Citation" button below the citation text.

By clicking through to the image and bringing up the Information tab, you can see how many more details are available to you for your citation.

At home you will sometimes be advised that images are only available at a Family History Center or a FamilySearch Affiliate Library. That can be disappointing, especially if it's a record you really need. Send yourself the information by using the Email option under Tools and come to the library.

The screenshot displays a grid of 40 thumbnail images from a film set. The first thumbnail is highlighted with a green border and contains the number '103226'. The second thumbnail shows handwritten text 'K.400/1'. The third thumbnail contains the text 'SCOTLAND' and 'H.K.400'. The fourth thumbnail is a document header with 'PAROCHIAL REGISTER' and '1897-1954'. The fifth thumbnail contains the word 'BEGIN'. The remaining thumbnails are various pages of a document, likely a church register, showing columns of text.

The above is what you will see when you click through from Browse the Film. Look for the slides that have information about the record set and double-click.

Image Index Information

On the image page, make sure to note both the film number (corresponds to the DGS in the catalogue record) and the specific image number so you can easily find the record again if you have to or direct someone to it. This is an important part of your citation.

FamilySearch Affiliate Library

After you find the correct image, either:

- download it (if the licence allows) or
- use the screen capture feature of your computer or mobile device to save the record and/or
- add it to your ancestor's section of the FamilySearch Family tree (if you contribute to it)

It's also a good idea to either copy the FamilySearch citation (if available) and add any necessary details, or write a citation of your own

Hint: if you're unsure how to adapt FamilySearch citations, watch this video from genealogist Melissa Corn Finlay:

Finally – have fun! Genealogy can be frustrating at times, but it's also meant to be enjoyable. If you're frustrated:

- take a break
- move to another ancestor (don't forget to sketch at least a brief research plan)
- explore the FamilySearch Wiki, or
- just choose a record set relevant to your family and start browsing – you never know what you'll find!
